for windows 10 pro and am trying to make an midi controller in java for my piano using the arduinouno, I've found a lot of piano midi controllers, but unfortunately most of them are very buggy and although this one works, it's a bit of a hassle because it doesn't have a lot of features or you have to re-create them, so I would like to make one that you can just make a midi controller or a keyboard controller in the different qualities and you're able to change the velocities, keys, and so on, like in this case, is a neopiano, or it can be just a keyboard. motorola m1s slr camera 1mm ros and kfz 251/17 midi kbd controller free, so I wanted to make it a bit easier, and I managed to do it, in this case, for windows 10 and I wanted to make it in java because it's very simple to do and it would be better for the computer, since you can install a app in the windows store if you make a app and this would be good for the owner of the computer, you would just install a program and it would be on there, or it could be a background process that's already running in the computer, so you don't even have to open the laptop and you can change the midi output, as well as the interface and the "quality" of the keyboard, as well as the velocities of the keys, and the notes, and the intonations, the controller itself is made in java, all the buttons are javax.swing. JButton, and the keyboard is in javax.swing.JButton, and I've also created the different qualities of the keyboard, that's how it's designed, with a midi synth keyboard, a piano, an arpeggiator, so when you press the buttons, it plays a different note, this is how it works in the arduino controller, but this one can be in java, it's really easy to do, it just takes a little time, but it's not too difficult, I think that I can do it, and the other thing is that the computer sees the controller, it just reads the control device from the usb port of the computer, and there's no need to install 82157476af
